Save the planet AND get comfortable?

It is possible with the new fashion brand WearPatch. This brand has been created to eradicate the fashion waste. WearPatch does this by using fashion waste as a source material and by including a community in the design process.

Collectively, we throw away 200 million kilo's of textiles every year. On top of that, 30% of the clothes produced never gets sold. This sounds inevitable, but we believe it can be changed. We decided to take a first step by using fashion waste as a source material to create their products. We take two forgotten sweaters and turn them into one unique sweatpants. These sweatpants are co-designed together with our growing community of users to ensure that our products do not end up in the trash.

Join our movement and help us turn waste into fashion.
